Student Artwork

Item	Description	Value
Pre-K/K	Pre K/Kindergarten: "My Mondrian" What do you get when you ask 19 prek and kindergarten students to paint? A modern masterpiece. The students were introduced to the work of Piet Mondrian. We discussed the elements of line, shape and color. We talked about vertical lines which are awake and full of energy and horizontal lines which look like they are sleeping. We also talked about squares and rectangles. Finally, we discussed the primary colors of red, blue and yellow. While combining all of these simple elements and practicing their fine motor skills by painting, cleaning brushes between colors and then painting again, the students made great strides. Their Mondrian painting would make the famous Dutch painter proud.	Priceless
1st	1st Grade: "Can't Get Enough of Kandinsky" Painted with colors of today, this painting would certainly be a Pottery Barn favorite. The students were introduced to the work of Wassily Kandinsky. We discussed the element of shape noticing Kandinsky's use of concentric circles within a square. The students further developed their painting skills. Throughout the process of painting, they focused on their fine motor skills and their ability to follow directions. While striving to master these skills, they produced a beautiful work of art worthy to hang in any home or office.	Priceless
2nd	2nd Grade: "Ladybugs" Don't pass up this eye popping masterpiece! These talented students made a mixed media piece combining watercolor resist, diffusing paper, and twistees. They carefully drew leaves while critically looking at samples. By letting the pencil draw what the eye saw, they further developed their drawing skills. After cutting out a stencil and tracing it, they colored their ladybugs with sharpies and markers on special diffusing paper that allows water-based colors to blend once sprayed with water. This is a very exciting process for anyone regardless of age. Their ability to follow directions, listen carefully, and work hard resulted in an intricate piece that pops off of the wall.	Priceless
3rd	3th Grade: "Beautiful Butterflies" Own your own butterfly collection with this beautiful one of a kind display. While carefully looking at models of butterflies the students noticed the shapes and detail of the butterfly wings, as well as the length and segments of their bodies in relation to the wings. They did many line drawings trying to accurately draw these butterflies. After focusing on the elements of line and shape, they were introduced to form. They were encouraged to create their own butterfly out of model magic. They finished off their creations by brightly painting their butterflies.	Priceless
4th	4th Grade: "Sea Life" Take a dive under the sea with this collection of prints. The fourth graders were busy drawing a sea animal of their choice. They sketched the animal and placed it within a coral environment. After they transferred the image to some foam, the students learned the technique of print making. Finally, they made some shells and coral using a copper repousse technique.	Priceless
5th	5th Grade: "What's In The Cupboard?" The 5th graders came up with their own ideas of what should be placed in the cupboard. By working together they decided which drawings should be placed together, where the drawings should be placed and what colors should be used. Through the process of reverse glass painting they were able to produce this stunning piece of art painted on a window from a 1910 farm house. This would make a great conversation piece for any home.	Priceless
6th	6th grade: "Fruit Batik"	Priceless

Student Artwork

	The sixth graders explored the world of fruit inside and out. After sketching what the fruit looks like on the outside when placed in a still life, they further investigated what beautiful shapes, colors and textures were hidden inside. When cut in half or in quarters the fruit takes on a whole new look. The students combined their ideas and made a final fruit sketch on watercolor paper. Their pencil lines were then covered in Pancake batter acting as a resist. When dry, the artwork was painted using watercolors. After the batter was flaked off, colorful markers were used in contrasting colors to add further excitement to this outstanding piece.
7th/8th	7/8th Grade: "Garden of Knowledge" Take a walk through this unique garden of knowledge. The students combined their writing talents with their drawing and painting skills to make this one of a kind collage. After much collaboration, the 7th and 8th grade students developed the final drawing for their canvas. They sketched the design with charcoal and then painted it with acrylics and a glazing medium. This garden has a little something for everyone.		Priceless
